

Organizational Tutors, founded and led by Anna Levy-Warren, Ph.D., is a premier network of highly trained academic and executive functioning coaches working at the intersection of education, neuroscience, and psychology. We focus on strengthening students' executive functioning capacities, effectively managing complex neuropsychological profiles, and helping children overcome social/emotional obstacles to learning.

We offer individualized, targeted, in-home and virtual support for students of all ages (kindergarten through college) who struggle with:

- executive functioning and attentional weaknesses
- language-based learning challenges, literacy, and dyslexia
- visual-spatial and auditory processing issues
- social/emotional difficulties that impede academic success

We are seeking independent, self-starters who are deeply passionate about working directly with students. Applicants must have prior experience working in this capacity.

Benefits of working within the OT Network include:

- Designing your own flexible schedule
- Receiving individualized support and coaching from a team of experienced supervisors
- Gaining clinically/professionally relevant experience with children and adults
- Utilizing your expertise and creativity by designing curriculum for individual students
- Having access to our high volume of referrals from schools and families
- Setting your own session rates and retaining the majority of your client billings through OT's progressive fee structure

Application: Current and recent graduate students in schools of education, psychology, and social work (and similar fields) are encouraged to apply. We require availability for a minimum of 4 sessions per week. We are only accepting applications for in-person tutors at this time.

Please email a résumé and detailed cover letter describing your interest and relevant experience to info@organizationaltutors.com. In your letter, please also identify the geographic area where you would be available to hold sessions in person. We look forward to learning more about you and how you can lend to Organizational Tutors' mission.

Organizational Tutors is a woman-owned and family-friendly company.
